JERSEY BOG PEAT PROVIDES FUEL FOR A COMMUNITY.

New York, Sept. 4—Out in Morristown, N. J., is a man who is "besting" the coal strike on novel lines. He isn't in the least concerned about a famine or high prices, or any other of the vexatious coal questions which agitate the breasts of his fellow men, because he have a literature. low men, because he hapepus to have a lit-tle possession which beats coal all to pieces. This is a peat bog—as genuine as if he had imported it straight from the

If he had imported it straight from the Ernerald Isle—and all he has to do when he wants fuel is to have it dug out by the cartload and deposited at his door.

The lucky individual, chuckling in his sleeve at coal monopolists, is John D. Canfield, who opened up that part of Morristuwn known as Normandie Park, and who was the pumping station in the Columbia Meadows which furnishes the water supply for the park. It was the need of coal for the pumping station that turned Mr. Canpumping station that turned Mr. Canfield's attention to peat and made him lend a willing car to the tales told by Mr. R. C. Burnett of peat in the Columbia Meadows. Mr. Burnett, who comes of one of the

LOOK OUT FOR

The cold-wave flag means zero weather, icy. moisture-laden winds, and the beginning of winter in earnest. To Catarrh sufferers there is nothing cheering in these climatic changes, for with the return of cold weather, all the disa-greeable symptoms of Catarrh appear: blinding headaches, dizziness, a stuffy feeling about the nose that makes breathing difficult, chest pains, and, as the disease gresses, a discharge of nauseating mat-continually hawking and spitting.

Catarrh is a most disgusting disease, the foul mucous secretions that are constantly cropping back into the stomach, contami-nate and poison the blood and is distributed throughout the body, and it then becomes a deep-seated, systemic, persistent disease that must be treated through the blood, for it is beyond the reach of sprays, washes, powders or external treatment of any kind. S. S. S. soon clears the system of Catarrhal matter and purges the blood of the irritating poisons, thus effectually checking the further progress of this senious and far reaching disease.

Look out for Catarrh in the winter, for cold stirs the blood and causes excessive secretion of mucus and brings to life all the lumbering poisons that make Catarrh the most abominable of all diseases. S.S.S. keeps the blood in such per-fect order that cold waves cause no alarm and the change from oldest families in that portion of the country, says that one of his earliest recollections is of his father's Irish farm hands scorning coal and digging peat in these very meadows for their personal use. Mr. Canfield had heard these takes many times, and gave them sufficient credence to make himself, some years ago, sole owner of the meadowa but not until the necessity arose of feeding his engines at the pumping sistion with something that was not-like coal at the present pricegoing to devour him did he really test the possibilities of his peat bog.

Then he found he pretty nearly had a coal mine, or better, at his very door, for those who have burned the peat say it is vastly superior to coal.

In the beginning the still somewhat sceptical owner had his doubts about peat for big fires. It might feed a kitchen stove but had it power to make steam? He tried it in his engines and found it had, and so pleased is he now with it that he is not likely ever to bother with coal again.

BIT OF EMERALD ISLE.

The peat bog is a veritable bit of Erin put down in the Jersey mendows. Everybody knows that in Ireland the peasants upward of the "slain," and out comes the peat in a smoothly cut. long brick, One turn of the "slain" and this brick is deposited on a turf sled on the ground at "Pat's" slde. Brick after brick of peat is closely packed in neat rows on the sled by the skillful "Pat," who does it all by a dig, a swing and a turn of his "slain," and never touches the peat with his hands. When finally the sled is loaded it is drawn off by a man and horse, another sled being left for "Pat" to load.

The man with the sled drives the horse to a place in the meadows, which has been cleared, and there he, with assistance, unleasing it brick by brick and spreads it out on the ground in rows to dry. At this stage of the process the peat is very wet an i only and the blocks must be handled with care or they will break.

HOW THEY ARE UNLOADED.

So they are unloaded one at a time, the workmen taking a block in two hands and putting their hands under it, much as if they were handling a baby, and then gently laying it length down on the ground, in rows as close together as possible.

For a week the peat remains drying like this, when it is turned and dried on the other side. At the end of two weeks all the blocks are gathered up and stood on end, in plies of six, for a final week of drying. This drains out any possible water. By this time the blocks have shrunk a little and are dry and hard and ready for use. It is then carried off to the near-by pumping station.

MEANING OF THE MORMON Conan Doyle and Robert Louis Stevenson on the Latter-Day Saints

"BLOOD ATONEMENT" DOCTRINE.

The doctrine of "blood atonement" attributed to the Mormons in connection with the Pulitzer murder has figured prominently in English literature for more than half a century. It seems to have sprung mainly from the incidents connected with and following the "Mountain Meadows" massacre in 1857.

Scores of books and pamphiets on this subject have been written, most of them by the pens of those whose opposition to Mormonism in any form was intense and ancompromising. The opposition to the doctrines of the "Letter-Day Saints" prior to 1847 seems to have been caused mainly by an abherrence of the doctrine of polysamy, because of which the followers of Joseph Smith and Brigham Young were driven from one pisce to another until they finally settled in Utah.

Up to this time little or nothing is said about "blood atonement," but after the "Mountain Meadows" horror the books upon Mormonism written by its enemies teem with assertions that the term means nothing else than a pretext for murdering such persons as stood in the way of the elders of the church when they wanted to "seal" unto themselves the wives or "Robbet and the presents as the more than the crucifixion of the Savior as an atonement for the sins of markind. On the other hand, Brigham Young is all to have used the following language in "The Lord commands you not to pity the case in the transgressor would exhibit the law of Good no matter by whem it was done. There are sins that can be atoned for by an offering upon an aitar as in ancient days. They must be atoned for by the blood of man."

The "Book of Mormon," upon which Mormonism is founded and which is alleged to be a series of divine "revelation" said to have been made at Nauvoo. Ill., on July 12, 1840, in which policyamy is sought to be justified, and in which the following "cummandment" relative to sacrifices appears:

monism is founded and which is slieged to be a series of divine "reveations" made to Joseph Smith, the founder of the sect, who tains no direct reference to the distrine of "blood atonement." The nearest approach to it appears in a "revelation" said to have been made at Nauvoo. Ill., on July 12, 1841, in which polygamy is sought to be justified and in which the following commandment "PROMULGATED BY SMITH.

"Abraham was commanded to offer up his son Isaac, nevertheless it is written thou shalt not kill. Abraham did not refuse, and it was accounted unto him for righteousness.
